

People

JUST MARRIED!

The dress, the cake, the flowers, the secret plan! Sandra Bullock weds TV tough guy Jesse James in a surprise ceremony

JUDE LAW
Cheats With The Nanny

Zahara Marley Jolie

ANGELINA
Her Baby's Health Scare—All's Well

$3.49US $4.79CAN 3 1 >

0 72440 10227 9

www.people.com (AOL Keyword: People)

Stefano Gabbana after a workout at the Boxing Federation gym in Milan.

Runway to Ringside

Stefano Gabbana is no stranger to knockouts. As half of the Italian designing duo Dolce & Gabbana—whose fans include Madonna and Nicole Kidman—he's helped create several seasons of winning collections. So how does he relax? By delivering a few more punches.

Why did you take up boxing?

It really helps me unwind. It's a physical and psychological release.

Are you going to go pro?

There are some tournaments, but they're friendly. I already have the best career in the world. I love to box, but it is just a hobby.

How will your runway bow look with a broken nose? Aren't you worried about your face?

I do what I can to protect myself—a helmet and mouth guard—but I come home with bruises on my face. Sometimes a black eye can be sexy.

Who hits harder: the fashion world or boxers?

As far as I'm concerned, the fashion punches can be more painful.

He cleans up nice: Gabbana (left) with celeb fan Jennifer Lopez and Domenico Dolce.

SNEAK PEEK: BRITTANY MURPHY'S NEW AD

Brittany Murphy remembers her very first pair of Jordache jeans—a gift from her mother. "She had an adult pair and I had a little matching pair," remembers the actress, who is now the denim company's new spokesmodel. Murphy posed for the ad, which debuts in late July, on an estate in upstate New York atop a large horse. "I wasn't nervous at all," she says. "Nothing comes between me and my Jordache!"

JORDACHE